But it was Mr Nixon. He was an old friend of the family.

'Good evening, young man,' he said.

'Mr Nixon is here for dinner, Philip,' said my mother. I liked him, but I wasn't very happy to see him tonight, because I wanted to talk to my mother. We started our dinner, but we didn't say very much. At the end of the meal I told my mother that I wanted to go to the post office. I had an important letter to post.

'A letter to a girl?' laughed Mr Nixon.

'Yes,' I said.

When I got back home Mr Nixon was still there.

'Come and sit down, Philip,' he said. Can I talk to you?

I sat down. 'Well, my boy,' he said. 'I want to marry your mother.'

I was surprised.

'I asked her to marry me yesterday, and she said yes. Did she tell you about me in her letters? No? Well, it's difficult to write about that in a letter, of course.'

I laughed. 'Yes, it is. This is wonderful news.'

Then my mother came in, a little red in the face.

It was something new to me that my mother could fall in love. Perhaps, like all sons, I only thought about my own life. So I decided to say nothing about my news. That evening my mother came first for me. I could tell her about Agnes tomorrow.
