Goal:

Focus:

There's only one argument when it comes to the concept of conserving our planet and protecting endangered species, and that's the simple fact that it's our duty.[1] After all, it's our fault that species have become extinct. Chemical fertilisers have reduced the number of insects responsible for pollination; farming and urbanisation have led to a loss of habitat for many species, and the demand for materials such as ivory has been responsible for an increase in hunting. All of these activities have caused thousands of species to be lost over the last century, and continue to wreak havoc on our world.

[2]Maintaining a balanced eco-system is a goal for all of us. When endangered animal and plant species face extinction, that balance is seriously affected, and biodiversity is reduced. It is our duty to ourselves and to future generations to prevent this from happening. While we cannot completely eradicate our impact on the world due to our need for natural resources to survive, we can work towards using those resources in as sustainable a way as possible, so that we, and other species, can survive.

It's not just the planet that we risk when we live unsustainably. We also risk our own health. Without nature, we don't have access to oxygen, clean water or the food we need to sustain us. When habitats are lost and animals are forced to live closer together, diseases spread more quickly across species and humans are also endangered. Nature provides us with the medicines we need to combat existing and potential future diseases. When nature dies, our hope for medicinal cures die, too.

Admittedly, conservation is costly but taking care of our planet is not something we should ever put a price on. [3]Those people who say that conservation is too expensive care only about economics. There's no point making lots of money if we have no planet to provide for us. [4]Making conservation our main priority and protecting all living things is the only way we can ensure a sustainable planet for future generations. If we don't do that, we may as well just not bother.

'Conservation is a never-ending endeavour.'

'Taking care of a forest is like looking after your well-being.'

'The key to a sustainable future is the balance between nature and industry.'

'Nature can look after itself.'

MAKING HARSH DECISIONS

Conservation is an issue which may appear clear cut to some but is actually a very challenging, complex issue. On the one hand, we are fully aware that we need to protect nature from harm in order for us to be able to survive here on Earth for generations to come. On the other hand, we have limited nancial resources. It has been estimated that we need $76.1bn to protect all endangered species – every single year. This amount is simply not sustainable and requires us to prioritise.

The rst thing we need to do is recognise our true role in extinction. We all feel responsible when we hear about animals in danger of becoming extinct, and extinctions have increased over the last hundred years, possibly hundredfold. However, animal species die with or without human interference. It's predicted that 99.9% of all creatures which have lived on Earth have died out. Species therefore come and species go, and it is a natural part of life. We need to focus our efforts on preventing our impact on biodiversity from getting worse, and protecting already affected species whose extinction would jeopardise the planet and our existence on it.

Prioritising means making harsh decisions. Cute animals which attract donations are unlikely to be at the top of the protect list. It would be distressing to see pandas and gorillas go, but if they did become extinct, the impact to us would be minimal to non-existent, whereas the loss of other creatures would be far more devastating. Insects which cross-pollinate crops, for example, must be saved to enable food sources to grow, and squiggly worm-like creatures that live underground may be ugly, but they may also hold the key to cures to currently incurable diseases.

It is understandable that conservationists want to rescue as many species as possible, but they are led by their hearts and not their heads. In a context where it simply isn't possible to save them all, making priorities is the only way forward.

New smartphone design to feature holographic projection

A small San Francisco based tech company have announced plans for a new smart phone with the capacity for holographic projection, which they're calling Trufon 1. This amazing new technology will enable owners to watch movies in true 3D, on the go.

It comes with a whole host of other features, including a year's free subscription to their own media-streaming service, allowing you to wow your friends and put on a real show – all from your own mobile phone.

Ravi

If I'd passed my exam with flying colours, I [1]wouldn't/would be so down about my result. You see, I only just scraped a pass. If it hadn't been for my nerves, I [2]might/ would have done better, to be perfectly honest.

Jessica

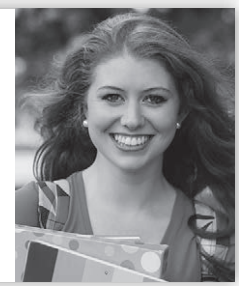
When I was younger, if I had some free time, [3]I'd spend/I'd spent it studying. If I [4]could/ would go back in time, I would put less pressure on myself to succeed and try to have more fun.

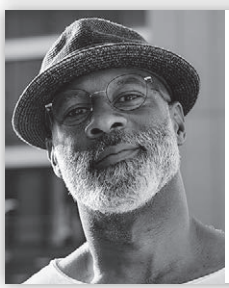
Sam

If it [5]had/ hadn't been for a really amazing history teacher, I wouldn't have fallen in love with the subject. She really made it come alive, so much so that I ended up becoming a history teacher too. If [6]I'd had/I had a top-notch science teacher, maybe I'd have a different career today.

Loretta

If I was more disciplined with managing my time, I [7]am/ 'd be a better student. It would also help if my friends [8]were/ would be studying law too, so that we could compare notes and discuss our classes.





Carlos

I can't help but think that if I'd started getting serious about my English earlier, [9]I'd be/I'd have been more confident now. Maybe if I [10]went/ had been to an English-speaking country to study for a bit, my conversation skills would be better .

I've always been a very [1]vigilant/above-board person. I'm careful to make my online passwords strong, I'm [2]discerning/bogus about who I trust and [3]street-wise/gullible when I travel. Aside from one time when I was [4]ripped off/preyed on by a street vendor selling overpriced pineapples and another time when I was [5]taken in/lured by a kid collecting money for charity, who I later noticed spending it on ice creams, I've never considered myself particularly [6]gullible/bogus.

But while I was at university, I met Adam in one of my classes. We hit it off straight away and over a few months we began spending more time together and chatting online. He would often send me photos of his cooking, which was quite a clever [7]ploy/scammer to look impressive.

But coincidences kept coming thick and fast. He would mention seeing a film that was my favourite. He would send me a link to a very unusual song, which happened to be one that I had once danced to in a performance. I began to question whether this was an elaborate [8]scam/ruse. How could he know these details? I started to wonder if the whole friendship was a scam. Perhaps Adam was one of those people who preyed [9]on/off unsuspecting friends. So I waited, almost expecting him to ask me for a large loan for a sick relative.

The final straw came when I noticed some suspicious log-ins on my social media account. They came from Adam's part of the city and an IP address I didn't recognise. I had the sinking realisation that something was very wrong indeed.

When I confronted him, he denied everything and was very insulted by any insinuations and what he called [10]bogus/gullible fabrications on my part.

The next day, I re-checked the social media reports and realised that the suspicious log-ins had in fact come off one of my own devices when I had been visiting a friend. They didn't come from a scammer who [11]saw through/purported to be someone else.

It turns out that all his behaviour had been [12]above board/discerning and those shared details were simply happy coincidences. I had been [13]duped/ripped off by my own suspiciousness. I felt really guilty for accusing my friend of being a [14]scammer/ploy.

This story has a happy ending, as we ended up getting married a few years later. However, to this day, Adam teases me mercilessly about the fact that I once accused him of being a [15]scam/con artist. He prefers to call it being a 'love artist'!

In my first job, I [7]_____ (be) a kitchen hand in a restaurant and it felt like we [8]_____ (always polish) the knives, forks and spoons after they came out of the big industrial dishwasher. They'd unload a huge tray and empty it out onto a trolley, which I [9]_____ (make) a huge clattering sound with all the pieces of cutlery hitting each other.

[illegible]

Whenever I [10]_____ (get) a whiff of petrol, it takes me back to the time when I must have been about six years old and we stopped to fill up our car in the middle of nowhere on a road trip. I [11]_____ (explore) the park next to the petrol station when I realised that my parents [12]_____ (drive off) without me. It took them about ten minutes to realise that they [13]_____ (leave) their son behind!

[illegible]

So, I'm in Thailand at this little restaurant and the waiter brings me this huge bowl of steaming yellow soup. I gingerly [14]_____ (dip) my spoon in and bring it to my mouth. Coconut and seafood. And then the chilli kick [15]_____ (hit) me. It was by far the spiciest thing I'd ever tasted.
